Rhossili and Worm's Head, Gower Peninsula

Rhossili probably gets its name in part from the Welsh word for moorland, 'rhos'. The second element refers to St Sili. Rhossili Bay curves along an arc running northwards from the village. The sandy beach is backed with sand dunes, and the southern end of the Bay is the small tidal island called Worm's Head.

Betws-y-Coed, Snowdonia National Park

The gateway to Snowdonia, and its neighbouring villages, Betws-y-Coed has a distinctly Alpine feel – enhanced by the dense Gwydyr Forest surrounding the village. Translating into English as ‘the prayer house in the woods’, it stands in a valley near the point where the River Llugwy and the River Lledr join the River Conwy.
